EVERY MEAL HAS A STORY LIKE NORMAN’S

“EVERY MEAL HAS A STORY LIKE NORMAN’S”

Norman, 64, a 40-year medical health professional, now working as a consultant, never thought he’d find himself at a food pantry. He’s lived a successful life and loved his work, but as he gets older, it’s becoming more difficult to secure work, so he currently serves as a substitute teacher when opportunities arise.

“I never thought I’d be here,” he said, referencing his first visit to a local food pantry. “It took me a year to even accept the idea of asking for help; it wasn’t until I got hungry enough.”

Despite Norman’s current circumstances, he says it’s been an amazing surprise for him and has helped debunk his stereotype of individuals needing help.

“As I wait in line at the pantry, I’ve met some of the most considerate and thoughtful people,” he reflected.

“I’ve been on the giving end many times, but I’ve never been on the receiving end – it is a gift of the highest order.”

Norman is willing to talk about his situation, though it took some time. “I felt embarrassed and had to learn how to get over that,” he explained. “The stronger feeling is grace, recognizing that we all do our best to contribute and sometimes it’s not enough. But I feel more a part of the community and more compassionate than ever.”

With help from the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) and his local food pantry, Norman has been able to find the resources he needs to live a healthy life.

Hello, friends!

As fall quickly approaches, it’s a busy time of year for your Foodbank, with the annual Holiday Campaign, the Long Haul Against Hunger radiothon and the Selfless Elf 5k.

As families begin to prepare for the end of the year, it’s easy to get caught up in shopping, holiday parties and family traditions. Here at the Foodbank, we’ll be helping supply holiday turkeys, hams and other food items to our hunger-relief partners. Hunger doesn’t take a break during the holidays, if anything, it can feel more noticeable for individuals trying to provide a nice holiday for their families. During this time of year, we turn to you for help.

The work of the Foodbank remains critical to the lives of people who are struggling with hunger. More than 263,000 people in our region experience hunger each year, and many of them do not qualify for public assistance. They have nowhere to turn but the food pantries, hot meal sites and shelters you support through the Foodbank.

Your Foodbank is an institution of compassion, fueled by your time and your financial support. When charity is given with love and empathy, it gives so much joy and happiness to both parties involved, those offering help and those receiving help. It is in these connections with each other that we see one another’s goodness.

As we close 2018, please consider helping us finish the year strong. In your support of the Foodbank, we see the endless goodness and potential for positive change in our community.

Thank you for helping make a difference.

Warm Regards,
Dan Flowers
President and CEO

The Greater Dover New Philadelphia Food Pantry is in an unmarked building. From the outside there's not much to see, a few vacant businesses and a large parking lot, but two days per week, a line of people wrap around the building waiting their turn to browse the pantry shelves.

The Greater Dover New Philadelphia Food Pantry, the Akron-Canton Regional Foodbank’s largest hunger-relief partner, serves approximately 650 families each week. In 2017, it distributed the equivalent of more than 2.37 million meals to its community members.

Uniquely, the pantry is fully managed and operated by volunteers. Each week, more than 100 volunteers unload and organize food items, pack boxes, and assist in loading cars.

Jim Rice, the pantry’s current volunteer chief operating officer, began volunteering with the pantry more than 10 years ago when he retired to the area. What began as a mere volunteer opportunity helping unload a truck, has become his labor of love.

During his tenure, Rice has been most surprised by the frequency of the pantry usage. He says that most clients use the pantry only seven times per year.

“A lot of people believe food pantries create dependency, instead of being a lifeline for people. However, they only use it when they need it,” he explained.

The pantry also offers a weekly delivery service, providing a 30-pound box of food to approximately 70 individuals who cannot drive, have mobility issues or are home-bound. Access to food can be difficult as there is no form of public transportation available in Tuscarawas County.

The pantry also does an excellent job of providing its clients with fresh, nutritious produce, provided by the Foodbank for free. Last year, more than 116 million pounds of fresh fruit and vegetables were given to families. To help ensure the safety of refrigerated items, the pantry benefited from a $10,000 grant for a refrigerated trailer secured by the Foodbank from BJ’s Charitable Foundation.

“Without our partnership, there would be no pantry,” said Rice when reflecting on his relationship with the Foodbank. “We wouldn’t be able to afford the quantity of food we’d need, and we would not be ending hunger in our area.”
