You don’t understand tragedy until you go through it yourself.”

-ASIA

Asia smiles as her children scramble to the produce table, they keep her busy throughout the day, as childcare costs are too expensive for her family. Once they go to school, she plans to enter a GED program and hopefully find a job she enjoys.

Growing up in the foster care system and not graduating from high school impacted Asia’s ability to find work. At one point, she and her husband were homeless, living with family and then a hotel when they felt they had overstayed their welcome. Once their money ran out, they found themselves at a local homeless shelter, living apart.

Fortunately, an Akron organization that helps homeless families stay together and achieve sustainable independence welcomed Asia’s family. With their help, they secured a car and house, and her husband found a job.

“Being there was a humbling experience. You take things for granted and when tragedy hits, you don’t know what you’ll do.”

Now, the family of four relies on her husband’s income. Asia has become a strategic budgeter, buying some items in bulk, stocking her pantry when she can, and visiting a local pantry when her food benefits run out toward the end of the month.

Network partners share best practices with one another. It's this network of partners that fight hunger on the front lines, serving families in neighborhoods and communities where people need food.

Throughout the year, the Foodbank offers the network a variety of opportunities for engagement, including collaborative networking events with other food programs, trainings, cooking demonstrations, and roundtable discussions covering helpful topics, such as grant writing, marketing and board/volunteer development.

Every other year, the Foodbank also hosts a Network Summit with the goal of bringing all its partners together to learn from one another, share best practices, and brainstorm ways to grow and evolve their programs.

This year, more than 120 attendees representing 80 hunger-relief partners joined us in August at NEOMED for the Summit. President and CEO, Dan Flowers, welcomed the group, the majority being volunteers, thanking them for being the hearts and hands of the network.

The keynote speaker was Dr. Terry Gordon, a nationally recognized cardiologist who takes a spiritual approach to all facets of his life after nearly losing his son in a car accident.

Gordon discussed the difficulties programs may face in service to others and gave examples of how to overcome obstacles and find the positive in all situations. He motivated attendees by inspiring them to continue to work hard within their communities, as he worked hard to transform his personal suffering into life lessons.

“If we are to grow, we must face greater and greater obstacles. It’s only by overcoming those obstacles, that we grow.”

The Director of the Network Partners and Programs department, Jill Oldham, highlighted updates about the Foodbank’s work and shared future plans that will enhance regional hunger fighting efforts for generations to come.

“We believe our work in creating thriving communities is ensuring that everyone has the food they need. We’ll do this by reaching further into areas that need it most and by feeding more people,” she said. “We can solve the problem of hunger. Unlike other illnesses, we have the cure. Our vision of a community where there is enough food for all, where there is access to healthy, affordable foods and where children have the energy and nutrients needed to grow, develop, think and learn is possible.”

THANK YOU FOR SUPPORTING HUNGER ACTION MONTH!

In September, the Akron-Canton Regional Foodbank, along with 200 Feeding America food banks, celebrated Hunger Action Month, raising awareness about food insecurity and hunger in our community.

Leaders throughout the community joined the Foodbank by going orange, the color of hunger relief, including Akron Children’s Hospital, the Pro Football Hall of Fame, your Foodbank and many more!

Hunger Action Month wrapped up with the 12th annual Taste of the Pro Football Hall of Fame event. Nearly 700 guests raised enough financial contributions to provide 772,000 meals! The winner of the People’s Choice Award was The Rail, a second victory for them.
DOYLESTOWN COMMUNITY FOOD CUPBOARD SERVES COMMUNITY FOR MORE THAN 40 YEARS

MORE THAN 40 YEARS AGO, A GROUP OF TEACHERS JOINED TOGETHER TO PROVIDE FOOD ITEMS TO LOCAL FAMILIES STRUGGLING DURING THE HOLIDAYS IN DOYLESTOWN, A SMALL VILLAGE IN WAYNE COUNTY.

Functioning for many years on an as-needed basis, the hunger-relief program housed in the local Methodist church was approached by two eager Boy Scouts in 2014. They had a vision for their senior Eagle Scout project to help the pantry move into a larger space they could call their own.

Now, the Doylestown Community Food Cupboard offers groceries to nearly 60 families. A five-day supply ensures individuals and families managing on a tight budget have the help they need to get through the end of the month.

“The families we serve are trying to provide three meals a day and I think a lot of them aren’t able to do that,” said Maureen Martin, the director of the pantry. “Some are making unhealthy food choices to stretch their dollar even further. We’re glad to be able to help.”

Martin and her volunteers typically see grandparents taking care of grandchildren and senior citizens coming through the pantry in need of help. More than half of the people served through the Foodbank’s network of hunger-relief partners are children under the age of 18 and seniors living on a fixed income.

The Food Cupboard is a choice pantry, meaning people can take food items they know they’ll use and eat. In addition to offering groceries, the program also offers monthly senior food boxes and a weekly backpack program to the three public schools and the parochial school in Doylestown. On average, volunteers help pack 165 bags each week for the backpack program.

“Until you’re involved in this work you don’t realize the need in this community, especially the kids. The kids are the ones suffering.”

The Food Cupboard sends notices and schedules home with children through the school system to help create awareness about its food programs, but Martin notices that some parents are reluctant to ask for help. Understandably, it can be difficult to seek help when a stigma still surrounds people in need.

The issue of hunger is near and dear to Martin’s heart. Though she’s worked at the local church for 20 years and has managed the Food Cupboard for the last 12, acknowledging difficult times came at an early age for her. “It’s been a part of me for so long now. I remember growing up with five siblings and you knew mom and dad were struggling. This is my passion.”

Because of the Food Cupboard’s relationship with the Akron-Canton Regional Foodbank, the program can provide even more nourishing food to its community members. “We’re able to provide fresh products, and more healthy and nutritional selections. Because of our partnership, we’re able to offer an incredible benefit to our clients.”
